This year's legislative session, like many of its predecessors, has been dragged out to the point where it ceases to reflect the will of the people and reflects only the maneuvering of politicians stalling for time on issues that could have been cleaned up months ago.

This is the kind of legislative attrition that wears down the members of state legislatures who are held in session longer than necesesary, to give all the loggyists a fair crack at them. In Washington, the lobbying is on a SOUTHERNERS in Congress must stall off civil rights legislation.

Spenders must do everything they can to make certain that spending is not offset by taxing, which would be fatal to their credo of spend and elect.

Representatives and senators elected with the help of unions must stand guard over their sponsors' interests. Legislators in Congress to stand guard over the interests of employers and financiers must be similarly vigilant, lest they be accused of scamping their responsibilities.

The premier of Russia is due here next month, and if Congress were not out of session by that time it would be in session, and that would call for an invitation to Mr. Khrushchev to address it.

If that were to happen, many a constituent might get the impression that his representative and senator had been playing footsie with enemy aliens. The matter would be brought up and milked dry in the next round of congressional campaigning.

And that is why it is agreed by those who know their Washington that Congress is about to adjourn. There were many good reasons without Khrushchev, but Khrushchev clinched

No other country could make such a statement, or even come close.

Mass education in this representative democracy may be as imperfect as its critics say it is, but it is far and away the greatest effort ever made to give everybody a chance to learn as much as he is capable of learning.

When critics list its imperfections, moreover, they always look at the seamy side of the cloth. They point to the failures and ignore the successes. They bear down hard on the examples of less-than-good results and shrug off the evidence of more-than-good re-

In truth, education in the United States has grown to be such a massive effort that no generalizations about it are possible.

There is every conceivable kind of effort being made, from the poorest to the finest.

September Not Melancholy All of us who will argue at the drop of a time thanks to the long hours of summer maple leaf that September is the finest month of the year, all things considered, will not be patient with anyone who says it is the beginning of the melancholy season.

What we consider about September that makes it the finest month is the gradual decline in humidity, until one evening the air will be so dry it crackles; the gradual improvement in sleeping conditions and the tapering off of some of the wildly exuberant growth of weeds. There's nothing melancholy

We take into consideration a net improvement in social conditions when the moppets go back to school, which is where they belong after three months on the loose.

We admit to getting fed up with baseball and having a sharpening appetitite for football. We also confess, if we are honest, to a certain weariness that comes from attempting to do too many things over too long a

To be blunt about it, we are getting a little tired of summer on the terms of summer. If it were to continue indefinitely, we'd have to devise new terms for the long pull, such as less lawn-mowing, less lateness of retiring, less earliness of arising and so on - to year since the war. With few ex-

There's nothing melancholy about September, except the people who make it seem that way by mooning about summer. The truth is that September is part of summer and would be so considered were it not for the historic blooper of having Labor Day prematurely, giving rise to the impression that summer is over.

to date during his tour of Europe U.S. Treasury. are significantly different from the comparable visit by President Woodrow Wilson, just before opening of the World War I Peace Conference, 1918-19.

This writer was one of 40 or so American newspaper reporters who accompanied Mr. Wilson to Paris and thence to Great Britain, Italy and Belgium.

The U.S. journalistic hounds tailing Mr. Eisenhower no doubt number well into the hundreds with many more from other nations.

Mr. Eisenhower's exceptions in the West German captial of Bonn and in Great Britain are being hailed as the most enthusiastic ever accorded any foreign chief of state in those countries. But if so it must be due to an increase in standing room, because the crowds that turned out to see Mr. Wilson in London, Paris, Rome and Brussels stood in packed masses as far as the eye could

And in those days there were no diversions, such as radio and television, that now keep direct view-

WILSON AND Eisenhower are alike in that they played leading roles in winning great wars and their tours were in quest of true peace. But Wilson's was closer to the end of hostilities and his appeal was keyed much more to the European hoi polloi.

In fact, both Wilson's initial and ultimate failures as to the peace conference success stemmed from his blatant attempt to arouse the people of that continent, all and sundry, against their prevailing rulers.

In his 14 points, proclaimed Jan. 8, 1918, he had appealed for selfdetermination for all peoples joining up on his side and in four more points, announced in the following summer, he promised liberty and peace without penalty to Germans if only they would rise and overthrow their Kaiser.

Surrendering, Nov. 11, 1918, the Germans accepted these Wilson points (mistakenly as it turned out) as a peace offer subscribed to by all their enemies.

Besides Isking the ring of Wilson's oratory, even more than did the Germans, Allied peoples in Europe credited Wilson with finally winning the war for their side

President Eisenhower's actions all their debts from the bountiful

While their massed thousands cheered, the rulers of Allied countries all alike observed Wilson's speechmaking with jaundiced eyes. When he sat down with these fellow rulers behind closed doors, Wilson quickly discovered that the play was strictly on the old diplomatic lines - for expanded boundaries, economic advantages, military guarantees and all other forms of nitranational self In the end Wilson yielded so much to his greedy conferees, in order to achieve final agreement, that his own U.S. Senate rejected both the treaty and its attached League of Nations Covenant.

PRESIDENT Eisenhower's process clearly is opposite to President Wilson's. Far from trying to dragoon allies into knuckling down to his ideas in advance, Mr. Eisenhower is in Europe now solely to feel out wishes of the West German, British and French chiefs of state.

His basic aim plainly is to discover the maximum point to which the four principal non-Communist powers are in agreement, vis-a-vis

In other words, the President is trying to find out exactly how far he can go when it comes to trading for peace with the supreme representative of world Communism, Nikita Khrushchev, with assurance of support by the nations we call our friends. While Mr. Wilson, in common with the late John Foster Dulles, was predominantly a Presbyterian preacher, given to laying down the laws of God and man, Mr. Eisenhower is at heart a practical pa-

From 1955 to the spring of 1957, the names of 313 girls who married before age 19 were obtained and comparisons were made of these girls with the girls from the study who had not married.

"Our idea that girls who marry early tend to be less well adjusted and to have less satisfying relationships with their families than do their classmates was supported by some of our findings."

Girls who married early had engaged in a more steady dating pattern than those who had not married. Whereas 83 per cent of the early married girls had been dating only one person, going steady study, only 34 per cent of the undating pattern.

Barbecued Roast Is Easy---for Wife

Ladies - Here's a work-free new way to cook a delicious pot technique adds an appealing fl vor extra to a tasty pot roast, and it involves no labor for you.

The roast is browned well over aluminum wrap along with savory barbecue sauce. Broil the package The only work for the wary wife is the special barbecue sauce and if you're smart, you might talk the husband into that! Barbecue Pot Roast

4 Pounds blade-bone pot roast, 112 inches thick, salt and pepper, 1 recipe Barbecue Sauce, 2 stalks celery, cut in diagonal slices, 2 carrots, cut in diagonal slices, 1 small onion, thinly siced, 12 green pepper, thinly sliced.

Brown meat slowly for 20-30 min utes over low coals: season with salt,, pepper. Tear off a 21/2 fool length of 18-inch heavy-duty aluminum wrap. Place 12 Barbecue Sauce in center of foil; place meat on top of sauce: pad sharp bones with pieces of foil.

Cover top of meat with celery, carrot slices, remaining sauce; top with onions, pepper slices. Bring up torn edges of foil in tight double folds; fold ends up using tight double folds.

Place package on grill over low coals for 112 to 2 hours, or until tender; turn once during cooking time. Yield: Six servings. Barbecue Sauce

2 tablespoons butter, 1 onion. shopped fine. 1/2 cup chopped celery, 34 cup water, 1 cup catsup spoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons Worcesteshire Sauce, 2 tablespoon brown sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard. 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon cook until tender. Add water, catsup, vinegar, lemon juice. Worcestershire Sauce, brown sugar, dry

Broil crackers that have lost their crispnss until lightly brown:

UNION CHIEF QUITS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)-Frank P. Converse of Cleveland reportedly has resigned as head of Ohio Local 18, International Union of Operating Engineers. He has headed the group 41 years.

The Columbus Dispatch said Converse resigned at a directors' meeting in Toledo Saturday. He said he was tired and wanted to retire, the paper added.

At Converse's suggestion, the board named his assistant, John Possehl, to fill out his term
